DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This 3 story house demonstrates the peculiar effect of at least 2 remodeling projects. It probably once was similar to the 2½ story house to the right, but at some time the roof was raised to form a full third story. A recent owner, desiring to "Colonialize" the building rebuilt the entire street facade, the first 2 floors in flemish bond. He restored the cornice line and relief brick courses below it, but was unwilling to give up the extra space of the third floor where he installed 4 huge floor to ceiling windows. Though the lower two floors are arranged in 2 bays like the other houses, the size and placement of the windows have been changed.

These alterations together with the poor design of the details are an example of a wall intended but poorly executed renovation. The right bay is the entrance which is reached by 4 brick stairs which run parallel to the facade. Like the 3 houses to its right shares one of two double stooped, each with an iron railing. There is a cast iron coal door to the left of the stoop. The 6 panel door with transoms, has two wooden blinds and a stock "Colonial" split pediment which extends to the outside edges of the blinds. The 8-over-8 window has wood blinds, brick sills, splayed brick lintel and a modern window basket incorporating a plaque with the house number.

The two second floor windows are 6-over-6 double hung, with two narrow wood blinds, window baskets and brick sills. They are set immediately below the cornice. This cornice is formed by three courses of corbeled bricks.

Except for two brick piers at the side walls, all of the 3rd floor facade is of glass. This huge window consists of 4 vertical panels. The bottom portion of the 2 center sections is hinged at the top. There is a wood cornice at the roof line.

Basket weave patterned brick paving surfaces the sidewalk in front of this house and the 2 houses to the right.
